Abstract

A method of conducting an interactive electronic conference, including the steps of a) providing a registration process which initiates and provides access to the interactive program; b) polling participants and relaying the gathered geographic and professional information; c) introducing the experts and presenting the main program; d) inviting interactive questions or comments to restructure the program; and e) presenting conclusive remarks and providing follow up.